

Gov't to commence recruitment process of new TR Regulator

THE CURRENT TELECOMMUNICATIONS and Radiocommunications Regulator (TRR) will end his tenure on December 1 2015.

The Government, through the Office of the Chief Information

Officer (OGCIO) is now looking at commencing the recruitment process that will shortly take place for a new Regulator in accordance with the Act.

Government Chief Information

Officer, Fred Samuel, said there will be a transition period to ensure the successful candidate can undergo a hand over period with the existing Regulator and OGCIO, the various Government Departments, operators, and external stakeholders, as required, to ensure a seamless operation of TRR and continuance of regulatory services.

afternoon next week 4-5pm at VFHA.

University of Queensland's Professor Ian Frazer has multiple awards and accolades for his life's work in cervical cancer prevention with the development of the vaccine which has been heralded as the greatest cancer prevention breakthrough this century.

His life is written about in his biography "The man who saved a million lives".